GENTLEMEN,

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your Letter of the 20th instant, forwarding, for submission to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, the Nineteenth Annual Report on the condition and progress of the Royal University of Ireland.

I am, Gentlemen,

NINETEENTH REPORT

OF

THE ROYAL UNIVERSITY OF IRELAND.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY GEORGE HENRY, EARL CADOGAN, K.G., &c., &c.,

LORD LIEUTENANT-GENERAL AND GENERAL GOVERNOR OF IRELAND.

THE ROYAL UNIVERSITY OF IRELAND,
January, 1901.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

I have the honour to submit the Annual Report on the condition and progress of the University.

The total number of persons who entered for the various Academical Examinations of the University during the year 1900, was 2,658; while in the previous year it was 2,855.

The Appendixes to this Report contain Tables giving all important details connected with the Examinations held in 1900, for both male and female candidates. A Table is also given showing the Academic progress, in the various Faculties, made by Students matriculated in 1881 to 1899, inclusive.

There were two public meetings of the University in 1900. The first was of a formal character, and was held on the 3rd day of May, for the purpose mainly of admitting to their degrees the candidates who had passed at the Medical Examinations held a short time previously.

The usual annual meeting of the University to confer degrees in the several Faculties, and to declare the distinctions obtained by candidates at the Honour Examinations, was held on the 26th day of October. Details of proceedings at this meeting are given in Appendix II.

In conformity with the provisions of the Act of Parliament, 44 and 45 Vic., chap. 52, the accounts of the receipts and expenditure of the University, with the corresponding vouchers and other documents, are rendered quarterly to the Comptroller and Auditor-General, who submits an annual report and abstract to Parliament.

I have the honour to be

Your Excellency's faithful and obedient servant,

DUFFERIN AND AVA.

APPENDIX II.

NINETEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ROYAL UNIVERSITY OF IRELAND.

OCTOBER 26, 1900.

The Nineteenth Annual Meeting of the University was held on October 26, 1900.

The Vice-Chancellor, The Right Hon. LORD MORRIS AND KILLANIN, opened the proceedings with the following address:—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—It is usual, as you are aware, that the Chancellor of this University should, before the practical business of conferring degrees commences, address to you such remarks and observations as may occur to him as appropriate to the business in hand. I regret, and you must regret, the unavoidable absence of the Chancellor of this University, the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, a man as remarkable as has been produced in modern times, one of whom it may be said there is no shore of this great Empire, almost, that is not full of his labours, whether as the representative of Her Majesty in one of her greatest self-governing colonies, Canada, or as her representative under the burning suns of India—one who has been an ambassador of this country in almost every great country in Europe; in St. Petersburg, in Rome, in Paris—a man who carries in his veins the blood of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, his illustrious ancestor; and to that remarkable and eminent man might be applied words which our national poet, Thomas Moore, applied to Sheridan himself:—

“Whose eloquence brightened
Whatever it tried,
Whether reason or fancy,
The gay, or the grave.”

He has been prevented from attending this meeting. Although he has retired from public life he has, like a true and genuine Irishman, come home to live and spend the rest of his days amongst his tenantry and his friends in that part of Ireland with which his family have been for centuries connected. It is also a matter to be referred to that since Lord Dufferin addressed you this time last year a great sorrow and bereavement has fallen on his house. His eldest son, Lord Ava, has since met his death, but he met it nobly fighting for his Queen and country—and with his face to the foe. I knew Lord Ava well, and a finer fellow, and one with more promise never in my life did I know. Of him might well be said “Tu Marcellus eris.” This Senate most properly addressed his parents on their loss, and sent its condolence and sympathy to our Chancellor and his noble lady in their sorrow. We have also lost a member of our own body, a man of resolute will, of great native eloquence, and of great judicial firmness—our late colleague, Mr. Justice O'Brien. His place has been filled up by the nomination of a gentleman of considerable position in the country, who, in addition to discharging his duty as a country gentleman, has been also able to render important services connected with education in this country, on the National Board and elsewhere. I refer to Sir Henry Bellingham. This University has also suffered a great loss since we last met in the death of Professor Preston, a Fellow of the University—a man who, after running a distinguished career, both in Trinity College and in this University, was cut off at an early age—comparatively a youthful age as regards scientific success—but he had lived long enough to make his name of well-nigh European reputation. We have also to regret one who, although not in the position of being one of our colleagues on the Senate, or a Professor or Fellow, is a substantial loss to the University. I allude to the death of Mr. Oram, the late Chief Clerk and Librarian, who had been connected with the University since its foundation. I now turn from these reflections, which bring up sad memories, to matters of a more cheerful kind. In the early part of the spring the country was startled one morning by learning that our gracious Sovereign, Her Majesty the Queen, had resolved upon paying a visit to this portion of her dominions. I am able to say, upon the most indisputable authority, that that visit was conceived by herself, and came as much by surprise upon members of her own family as upon the public. It was a visit which arose from the emotional sympathy of a great monarch and a great woman, which was roused and called into action by the accounts of the loss of her Irish subjects in South Africa, and of their valour and daring. One of the finest passages ever delivered by that great and illustrious Irishman, Richard Lalor Sheil, in the House of Commons, was a eulogy upon the valour of Irish soldiers. This University resolved to present an Address to Her Majesty on her visit to this country, and it was presented to her in person by myself, as your Vice-Chancellor, accompanied by my friend, your Secretary, Dr. McGrath. Upon that occasion, the first on which it was possible that a precedent could be made, precedence was yielded to us next after the Corporation of Dublin and Trinity College, whose precedence were settled by long usage. On that occasion the Senate resolved to confer honorary degrees upon two personages who accompanied Her Majesty, namely, Sir Matthew White Ridley, a man whose academic career in Oxford was second to none, a man of genial temperament, and—which ought not to be forgotten by an Irish audience—a man of rational clemency; and also upon Sir James Reid, a physician of great renown, who is in permanent attendance upon Her Majesty. Early this spring I received, as your Vice-Chancellor, a letter from the Secretary of State for War placing at my disposal nominations to seven commissions in the Artillery, three in the Army Service Corps, and ten in infantry regiments. As I considered that these nominations were given to me purely as a trustee of this University I requested our Secretaries to call a meeting of the Senate, at which I attended, and stated that, of course, I would nominate whomsoever they recommended to me. Accordingly, the recommendations were made. Some two or three were rejected, on medical inspection; but their places were filled, and your twenty commissions have been awarded to members of the University, who have either taken their degrees or passed certain examinations. I think it right to refer to another matter as having occurred since last year. I am informed that the Cross of the Legion of Honour of France was conferred upon one of our Fellows, a Frenchman by birth, Professor Cadic, which is, of course, a remarkable recognition of what is thought of him in that great country. Another matter I wish to refer to as having occurred since last year is that one of our colleagues on the Senate, Sir William Thomson, ex-President of the College of Surgeons, was selected to go out to Africa in charge of the Irish Hospital. Whatever difference of opinion exists, if any does exist, on the question of warfare, no difference of opinion can exist as regards alleviating suffering. Sir William Thomson was selected for the post of head superintendent of the Irish Hospital by its founder and benefactor, one of the most remarkable of philanthropists, both by his generosity and by his modesty—I mean Lord Iveagh—who has expended many tens of thousands of pounds in the support of that hospital, making it one of his terms, as was stated to me by one of the doctors whom he selected, that it was not to be called as other hospitals were, after the names of those who had given the benefactions—that it was to be called, not the Iveagh Hospital, but the Irish Hospital. And with that hospital he sent out his eldest son, while his youngest son has been in the field and at the front, and has been wounded in action. I shall now refer to more practical matters connected with the business that we are engaged in. I regret to say that there has been a decrease in the number of those who sought Matriculation, and attended the examinations. What that has arisen from must be more or less a matter of opinion. My own opinion is strongly that it has, at all events, largely arisen from the fact that a great many active-minded young men, spirited fellows, were determined to go to the front, as it is called, and a martial atmosphere is not the best for the cultivation of the arts. The career of this University has been one, generally speaking, of steady progress. Instituted and founded in 1879, it has just attained its majority of twenty one years. And during its minority has it not done great service and good to Ireland? In the first place, this University, if not the pioneer, was far the most active in leading the way to the giving of degrees to, not alone the better half, but, if I may use the Irishism, the larger half of the human race, namely, the women. And the anticipations of those who wished that women should be put upon a level with men in a contest for prizes in this institution have not been disappointed, for I find that one of the highest prizes in this University has been carried away from all the male sex by a young lady—Miss Mary Bowler. This University, as is well known, is not a teaching body. The relation of teacher and pupil does not exist. It is an examining body, and as such, through its degrees, its prizes, its studentships, and its fellowships, it has acted as an indirect incentive to other institutions. This is not, in my opinion, the proper place, nor should anyone holding my position take upon himself to ventilate his own private opinions, when as Vice-Chancellor he represents the whole body of the institution. I, therefore, will not wander into the thorny question connected with University education in Ireland. Whether this University itself might be more or less remodelled—it was instituted rather hurriedly—so that it might partake of the character of a teaching institution, as well as an examining institution; whether other colleges might be endowed and affiliated to this University, or whether any other University should be founded, are matters upon which good men and wise men may have a difference. I have my own opinion; but upon this occasion I keep it to myself. I have been requested to call attention to some remarkable cases of prizes, studentships, and fellowships. The first upon the list furnished to me by the secretary is one to which I have already alluded, namely, Miss Mary Bowler, who carried away the studentship of £100 a year for three years in Modern Literature. The case of Mr. James Rice, of the Queen's College, Belfast, in Mathematical Science should also be referred to; and in the Junior Fellowships the Fellowship of £200 a year for four years in Ancient Classics to Mr. Robert Henry, Queen's College Belfast, and the Fellowship in Mental and Moral Science to Mr. Robert Magill, Queen's College, Belfast, are remarkable instances of the success of that great College. Nor should it at all be passed over that in Mathematical Science the Fellowship has been awarded upon very high answering to Mr. Arthur Conway, of the University College, Dublin. At the LL.D. examination, last summer, the gold medal was awarded for highly distinguished answering to Mr. George A. Stephenson, while the Chancellor's gold medal for English Prose Composition was awarded to Mr. Charles J. Griffin. The Medical Studentship Examination was very remarkable, because it was found, on its termination, that there were two candidates—Mr. Robert Allen, Queen's College, Belfast, and Mr. William Dargan, Catholic University School of Medicine—who had each answered so as to merit the almost unprecedented ratio of over 80 per cent. of the maximum marks which could be awarded, and who stood upon such an actual equality that it was almost impossible to discriminate between them. They both, therefore, in learning and in professional value, stand on an equality. I have now gone through what appears to me relevant to address to you, glancing over the events of the last year, and I shall now bring my remarks to a conclusion by calling attention to what I have already alluded to in other words. This great University, much as it does, has no part whatever in the moral or in the intellectual education of the pupils who attend its examinations. From its constitution it could not, and, I need scarcely, therefore, say it has not. But while we have no control over the moral or intellectual training of the students who come forward here and are recipients of our degrees, of our prizes, and of our Fellowships, on the other hand, they should always remember that these degrees, these prizes, these studentships, these Fellowships, are a hall mark to them in their various pursuits of life, and that especially to them as students of the Royal University is entrusted its honour and reputation.

Sir James Creed Meredith, one of the Secretaries of the University, then read the list of successful candidates for Degrees, and the persons named were presented by Dr. Joseph McGrath, the other Secretary, to the Vice-Chancellor, who admitted them to their respective Degrees.
